BRIEF HISTORY OF HAMBLEDON CRICKET CLUB, SURREY

The cricket tradition in Hambledon, Surrey is very strong and very old.

In July 1745, eleven maids of Hambledon, “dressed all in white”, played a match against eleven maids of Bramley on Gosden Common, Bramley and defeated them by 127 notches to 119. This fact is known from a press report given in the Reading Mercury dated 16th August 1745, which would suggest that cricket in Hambledon was not confined just to the gentler sex. There is also a report in 1844 in the Hambledon Village School Log Book at the Surrey History Centre, that the Rector commanded that a large number of children absent from school on account of “a grand cricket match in the village” were to be punished.

The above would suggest that cricket has been played at Hambledon for at least 173 years. However, most probably cricket has been played in the village for over 250 years.
